

Vice Admiral John J. Grossenbacher (Ret.) is the President and Laboratory Director of the Idaho National Laboratory. He provides overall direction and leadership to a laboratory that has been designated by the Department of Energy as the lead laboratory in advanced nuclear technologies. Prior to his retirement as a distinguished senior Navy submarine officer Admiral Grossenbacher served as the Commander of Submarine Forces and U.S. Atlantic Fleet, Submarines Allied Command Atlantic. In October 2001 he became the first Commander, Naval Submarine Forces and was responsible for all U.S. submarine forces. He led the successful integration and consolidation of the U.S. Navy's Atlantic and Pacific submarine forces. Prior to commanding the Atlantic submarine forces he served as Deputy Executive Assistant to the Chief of Naval Operations.

During Admiral Grossenbacher's 23 year career in the Navy he received numerous awards, including the Defense Distinguished Service Medal, the Legion of Merit with three Gold Stars, and the Defense Meritorious Service Medal. He is one of only a handful of officers in the U.S. Navy history to be awarded both the Stockdale and David Lloyd Awards for Leadership Excellence.

Admiral Grossenbacher is a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy and received a Master of Arts in International Economics and International Relations at Johns Hopkins University. He is also a graduate of the Harvard University School of Business.