

Carl Stoiber is an attorney and consultant, specializing in international nuclear law and policy. For some thirty years, he served in senior positions in the United States government dealing with nuclear affairs. In the Department of State he directed three offices: Nuclear Non-proliferation Policy; Nuclear Safeguards and Technology; and Nuclear Export and Import Control. He was Assistant General Counsel at the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. At the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission he served as Deputy General Counsel and later as Director of International Programs. He was also Counselor for Nuclear Policy at the U.S. Mission in Vienna. As a consultant he has conducted legislative assistance projects for the IAEA in over twenty countries. He is co-author of the IAEA Handbook on Nuclear Law, and is a lecturer at the International School of Nuclear Law at the University of Montpellier (France). Carl is also a freelance cartoonist and member of the American Association of Editorial Cartoonists. An accomplished mountaineer, Carl has recently climbed major peaks in India (Sikkim), China (Tibet), Argentina (Aconcagua), Mexico (Orizaba) and the Alps (Mt. Blanc). A native of Colorado, Carl holds degrees from several universities, including: Colorado (B.A. and J.D.), London (LL.M.) and Hague Academy of International Law (Diploma).